Wings over Winnebago - Bluebirds at Utica

Saturday, March 23
10:00 - 11:30 am
Coughlin Center, 625 E. County Road Y, Oshkosh

The public is invited to come for an enjoyable morning to hear of the latest efforts of Winnebago Audubon and Bluebird Restoration Association of Wisconsin (BRAW) to promote bluebird populations in Winnebago County. This will be accomplished in part, by establishing a bluebird trail at Utica Golf Course located a few miles southwest of Oshkosh. This location should provide a good example of prime habitat for increasing bluebird populations by installing and monitoring approximately 24 bluebird houses on the golf course. We will describe the efforts to install and monitor these houses using proven guidelines including predator control as promoted by BRAW. These guidelines maximize the nesting success of bluebirds since they are cavity nesters and depend on artificial nest boxes for improved nesting success.

Come to learn more about how you too may be able to provide increased bluebird nesting opportunities through installation and monitoring of a single nest box in your back yard or a bluebird trail consisting of multiple boxes. Hope to see you there. — Dave Misterek

Fox Cities Reads features Richard Louv
Author of “Last Child in the Woods: Saving Our Children From Nature-Deficit Disorder”

Winnebago Audubon is proud to partner with Fox Cities Reads 2013 to bring Richard Louv to our area April 22-24. Meet him in person at one of the presentations listed at the end of this article.

Richard Louv is a journalist and author of eight books about the connection between family, nature and community. His newest book is The Nature Principle: Human Restoration and the End of Nature-Deficit Disorder, which offers a new vision of the future, in which our lives are as immersed in nature as they are in technology. This future, available to all of us right now, offers better psychological, physical and spiritual health for people of every age.

Last Child in the Woods: Saving Our Children From Nature-Deficit Disorder has stimulated an international conversation about the relationship between children and nature. Louv is also the founding chairman of the Children & Nature Network at www.childrenandnature.org, an organization helping build the movement to connect today’s children and future generations to the natural world. Louv coined the term Nature-Deficit Disorder™ which has become the defining phrase of this important issue.

Count Cranes for ICF April 13

IMPORTANT NOTE to PAST COUNTERS:
Please confirm your site by April 1.

Sites available for new counters.

The Annual Midwest Crane Count is Saturday, April 13, 2013 from 5:30 a.m. to 7:30 a.m. Winnebago Audubon Society will again coordinate the Winnebago County sites with Evelyn Meuret as the Coordinator.

As always, you need to be assigned a Winnebago County site prior to the count date. Many of our counters have been participating for years and like to count on the same site each year. All previous counters should contact Evelyn by Monday, April 1 to secure their site. New counters should contact Evelyn to be assigned a site. If you provided your email address in 2011, you should have received an email reminder. When you confirm a site, please reaffirm your email address so we keep our contact information current.

Last year, the International Crane Foundation started using eBird to track the crane count. Crane counters are asked to log into www.ebird.org to set up a personal account for their crane count. All cranes counted through the Annual Midwest Crane Count will be logged through eBird.org. I recommend you go to www.savingcranes.org and read about the crane count. Select Species Field Guide, scroll down and select Sandhill Crane. Scroll down and read about the Sandhill Crane, listen to their calls to familiarize yourself for the count and select "To learn about the Annual Midwest Crane Count, click here". You should review the Counter Information where the data sheets are available to print, and the Data Entry Instructions: Using eBird. These are relatively easy to follow. You must register as a new user unless you used this last year or for other counts. To find your site on the Map, indicate the closest road to your site and type the road name and city and state in the Zoom to: search area. You should be able to see your site. Mark it as a personal location and log your crane count. If you want a site map for your site, Evelyn can e-mail you one.

We do not have plans to meet after the count for breakfast as we have in the past. If you are disappointed in our decision, please let us know. We are open to suggestions, since it is fun to share our counting experience and enjoy the camaraderie.

We look forward to having great participation in the crane count this year. Confirm the site you want to count on from previous years by sending Evelyn an email or calling and leaving a message. Please provide contact information when you do that. If you are a new counter or don’t have a favorite site, let her know that too. She will assign the remaining sites after the April 1 deadline, probably by April 6. Remember to mark your calendar for Saturday, April 13 for the Annual Midwest Crane Count.

“Wildlife from A to Z”

Wildlife photographer, John Van Den Brandt of Wild Wings Images, will take us on a tour of the animal kingdom, literally from A to Z, mixing his stunning images with humor, stories from afield and fascinating animal facts. From alligators to zebras, from tiny elf owls to massive orca whales, the presentation is a visual feast featuring many of John’s amazing images that have appeared in his nationally distributed calendars.

John Van Den Brandt has had a love affair with photography nearly all his life. He’s experienced in the art of wedding, portrait, product and model photography. It wasn’t until the last ten years however, that he merged his enthusiasm for photography with his fascination with the natural world.

A long-time “birder”, John has seen over 500 species of birds in the lower 48 states. The urge to capture some of those sights formed the basis of his true passion – wildlife photography. Before long, he dropped all other forms of photography to focus solely on wildlife.

In 2007, John founded his wildlife photography company, Wild Wind Images LLC. In addition to selling framed fine art prints, stock photography and speaking, Van Den Brandt’s nationally distributed calendars have sold over 70,000 copies.
John credits his knowledge of animal behavior and habitat, along with exceptional patience and a creative eye to produce images that uniquely capture his subjects in their essence. When not exploring the remote reaches of the globe,
and source of all inspiration.”

All of the creatures found in John’s images are certified to be wild and free. He doesn’t use game farm animal models or digital manipulation beyond normal darkroom techniques.

John hopes his work inspires viewers to find and explore their own wild places and to experience first hand the beauty and drama of the natural world.

May Birdathon

Help Audubon Continue To Sponsor Programs and Activities in our Schools and Community!

May is the perfect time for bird watching during the spring migration. And, so it is a great time for our Birdathon. You are invited to help us count! Give us a call to join one of our bird watching teams. We have a wonderful time visiting our favorite bird haunts to see, hear, count and record as many birds as we can in a 24 hour period. Spend an hour with us or the whole day. The Birdathon would not be a success without the generous contributions of our members and friends. Please sponsor our birders by pledging a per bird amount or fixed dollar amount. Your support allows us to continue providing quality events and programs in our community. Contact Carla Hansen for more information, to make a pledge, or join a team: 920-233-1129 or carlajhansen@sbcglobal.net

Tern South

A small craft advisory was posted and seas ran seven to nine feet. Yet that was of little consequence for the National Park Service's high-speed, 110-foot catamaran, the Yankee Freedom. Yes, we rocked and rolled a few times and I got splashed but I was headed to a place I've wanted to visit for a very long time.

The Dry Tortugas is a group of seven, small, sand and coral islands, lying 70 miles southwest of Key West, Florida. Its historical claim to fame is the presence of Fort Jefferson on Garden Key, an 1840's era fort, built but never completed, to defend the Gulf of Mexico from foreign invaders. During the Civil War it became a prison whose famous “resident” was Dr. Samuel Mudd, the physician who treated John Wilkes Booth's broken leg. Dr. Mudd was later released. Eventually the fort was abandoned in the 1880's. Because this region has extraordinary wildlife, from coral reefs to nesting green sea turtles, the dry Tortugas became a National Wildlife Refuge in 1908 and finally designated a National Park in 1992.

This pristine area is a mecca for birdwatchers, especially during April and May when neo-tropical migrants such as tanagers, warblers, orioles and thrushes are winging their way north from South America. They may land exhausted on these tiny islands before continuing. Although I was here the first week of February and not expecting an avian spectacle, I was pleasantly surprised. A Dry Tortugas specialty, sooty terns, were returning to nest.

Sooty terns, Onychoprion fuscatus, have an amazing story to tell. For identification, simply stated, these 16-inch terns are black on top and white underneath. They are warm-ocean-loving terns of the tropics, spending most of their lives on the wing and only coming to land to nest. The Dry Tortugas is one of their preferred nesting sites and the only one in the United States.

On this day, only about 1000 terns were present, talking noisily over the island, jostling for air and nesting space. This was just the start of nesting season. More terns will return over the next 1-1/2 months with the nesting colony eventually totaling 80,000 birds on Bush Key. After a nest site is selected on the sand, each female lays one egg. Both birds share incubation duties for 29 days. They care for the chick for 8 to 10 weeks, feeding it fish and squid. By June into July, the birds are dispersing. Adults remain in the eastern Caribbean. The young birds undertake an incredible journey to the waters off Africa’s west coast where they remain for five years or so before returning to the little dot of an island, Bush Key in the Dry Tortugas. How do they find it?!? A sooty tern may be seven to eight years old before it nests for the first time—the longest period from hatching to breeding for any tern species.

For most of a sooty tern's life, it plies the warm ocean on long, pointed wings. Reportedly, it even “sleeps” on the wing. What an amazing bird. I was fortunate to observe sooty terns for the first returnees had arrived early, just five days before my visit. How lucky was that! As an added delight, the sooty tern marks 600 on my U.S. life list, a birding milestone I've been creeping towards for at least 15 years.

Sooty terns weren't the only surprise of the day. Three other nesting specialties of the Dry Tortugas were present: the brown noddy, also an ocean-loving tern, and the masked booby. Both were life birds. Magnificent frigate birds perched on their favorite island but, unlike the other three species, they may be observed fairly regularly flying over the Florida Keys.

The 4-1/2 hours spent on Garden Key passed so quickly. I can only imagine what 80,000 noisy sooty terns must sound like. Snorkeling was also on the agenda but stirred up, murky water curtailed that activity. The return trip was expected to be rougher because we were heading into the wind but the waves were only five to six feet high. Not bad. Soon Fort Jefferson disappeared into the horizon. The 2-1/2 hour boat ride slipped by quickly. I bird watched from the stern the entire trip with little to report. All too soon, I was back in Key West on Mallory Square with the street performers and tourists watching the sun set over the Gulf of Mexico. A wonderful, memorable day.
